We're different on purpose - the reason is because we know and fully understand what the future of work looks like. We're here to bridge the support your people need to reach their career goals.

WHAT DOES IT LOOK LIKE?

Key Trends

2020 has been the most disruptive and unprecedented year for everyone. However challenging and difficult it may have been - It has introduced a new sense of normalcy, but at the same time has left us questioning our old and undated methods. New technologies, remote working and the impact of the pandemic on the job market is now rapidly changing the way companies conduct their operations and the type of talent they need to help them thrive in the new future of the workforce.

As we progress into the new decade, here are some of the key trends shaping the future of the workforce.

HYBRID WORKPLACE/WORKFORCE

Companies now have a higher focus on competency than location, and are now looking for a mix of remote and in-person employees. Location will not matter anymore, and we will see a significant narrowing of the digital divide.

TECHNOLOGY AND AUTOMATION

Many companies have seen great results from their teams working more remotely and in turn reducing their office asset by embracing new technologies.

GIG ECONOMY TO BRIDGE THE SKILLS GAP

Employers are now increasingly looking at part-time, freelance and contractors to fill in when companies require certain jobs to be done. Instead of hiring long-term, they are looking to "rent" employees for a premium when the need manifests.

RETRAINING AND RESKILLING TALENT

It is essential for employers to enhance an employee's skillsets to support the new working environment and changes to roles and responsibilities in order to support the emerging needs of the future.

WELLBEING AT THE FOREFRONT

It's become clear that supporting employees in their personal lives more effectively enables employees to not only have better lives, but also to perform at a higher level. Toxic productivity has been quashed for the new year.

Through the lessons learnt from COVID-19 we are able to now move into the new future of the workforce. This has created a need for the development of innovative large-scale upskilling, reskilling and redeployment initiatives. Companies are transforming the economic dynamism of their businesses by ensuring all workers are employable and productive in the future workplace. This is done purely through upskilling, reskilling and creating a system of lifelong learning within the organisation.

The need for such a system is becoming more urgent as the job market demands both more digital and more 'human' skills in the midst of what is called "the fourth industrial revolution."

“Nearly 50% of companies expected that by 2020, automation will lead to some reduction in their full-time workforce, while more than half of all employees will require significant re- and upskilling. The Covid-19 crisis has exacerbated these trends, increasing the need for large-scale, informed and collaborative action.”

report by the World economic forum*

The skills needed in the labour market will change rapidly. Employees need to validate their experiences with up to date professional development courses and frameworks as well as consider any skill gaps they may have that prevent their future employability.

How can you help your employees cope?

Searching for a job in a pandemic market is no easy task. This is when your people need you most. They require personalised carefully crafted offering to support their unique needs, not a one size fits all benefit.

Career Money Life offers a holistic career transition program designed to help you provide your employees with access to a wealth of different services, provided by quality, vetted and reviewed suppliers on one simple platform. This means that no matter what pathways are being pursued, there are services to meet everyone's needs.

After your employees have a clear idea of where they stand, it could be useful to identify career paths and focus on building future skills that will be required by companies in 2021. 94% of business leaders now expect employees to pick up new skills on the job - an increase from 65% in 2018. Support your employees with job search

Having stayed with your company for years, most of your transitioning employees would have been out of the job search game for a long time. This means that they may not be aware of the current trends, technologies and tips required to beat the competition. During this time, it is important for employees to update their Resumes with the appropriate keywords and formatting to beat the ATS bots. It's good practice to brush up on their interview skills and be prepared to use new video technologies and AI tools for interviews. Another key step to proactive job search is to update and utilise LinkedIn profiles to connect with recruiters and people in their networks who can help them have more job opportunities.

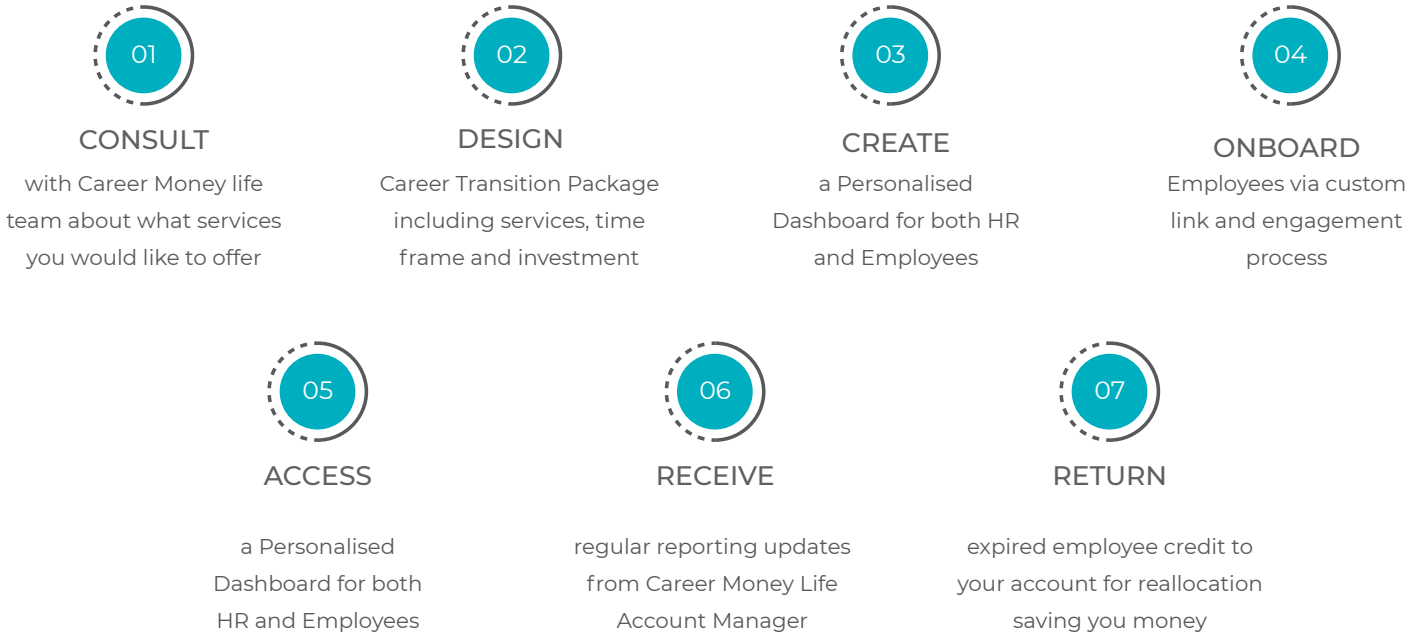

Career Money Life can help make this transition easier for your transitioning staff. Partnering with us means your staff will not only have access to a wealth of knowledge and informative content through our e-books and webinars but will also have access to 600+ suppliers that can help them optimise their job search.
